Bupa Global Opens New Office

- New Miami office formally opened to oversee expansion in Latin America
 - Panama and Guatemala office openings planned for 2014

Miami, May 14, 2014 – Bupa Global, the international private medical insurance provider, today announced plans for continued expansion of its Latin American operations with the formal opening of a new office in Miami, Florida.

The Miami office, which is the regional hub for Latin America and was formally opened today by Bupa CEO Stuart Fletcher and Palmetto Bay Mayor, Shelley Stanczyk, will be responsible for building and overseeing all of Bupa Global's operations in the region. Located in Palmetto Bay, the 65,000sq ft office will bring Bupa Global's existing Miami-based teams together under one roof for the first time while also allowing space for further growth.

Bupa Global has invested $90 million in Latin America over the past five years and plans further expansion with two additional office openings in Panama and Guatemala later in 2014, supporting its long-term commitment to the region.

Moses Dodo, General Manager, Bupa Global Latin America, commented:

"This is a signal of intent from Bupa Global and a show of our continued commitment to the Latin American market. We have been developing our Latin American business significantly over the past few years and these are the logical next steps in our expansion throughout the region."
